

New Features of Indian Journal of Federal Studies

Indian Journal of Federal Studies announces introduction of new sections—Research Communication and Contemporary Federal Discourse in India. Contributed by research scholars, academicians and activists, the section on Research Communication intends to serve the domain of knowledge by highlighting central research questions, paradigms, theories and methodologies on key areas of research undertaken in the institutions of higher studies. In a way, sharing methodological innovations and contested realm of knowledge is the central objective of this section. Similarly, the section on Contemporary Federal Discourse in India intends to generate informed debate on matters of federal concerns. This section has been designed in a manner as to contribute to the critical understanding of Indian federalism. It is in no way claimed that what is published under this section covers all shades of opinion and understanding. Hence editor welcomes further ideas and counter ideas on the themes published under this section of the Journal. Editor hopes that organic Federal intellectuals will like the idea and will work towards simulated studies on different dimensions of federalism across the globe. Editor invites contributions from scholars working on different dimensions of Federal Studies.
